PART III – PERIODIC ITEMS

- Locker assignment – The Accommodations department is in the process of assigning lockers and locks to each cadet. It is likely that Jr cadets will need to share lockers. Please be mindful of what you are storing – absolutely NO FOOD is allowed to be stored in your locker at any time. If you have not yet been assigned to a locker, please see CV Thompson-McCormick or SLt Donaldson.
- Spring Flooding – As we transition from winter to spring, water levels may increase, resulting in flooding in the boatshed. Cadets are reminded that the boatshed will be inaccessible if it is flooded so personal items should be removed from the lockers.

PART IV – GENERAL INTEREST

Did you know???

The Royal Military College (RMC) in Kingston, Ontario, Canada, has a rich and storied history dating back to its establishment in 1876. Established by an Act of Parliament in 1874, the college officially opened its doors on June 1st, 1876. It was founded to provide professional military education and training to officer cadets for the Canadian Armed Forces. In the early days, the training was focused on training officers for the Army and the curriculum included military training, academic studies, and physical fitness.

During World War I, RMC played a significant role in training officers for the Canadian Expeditionary Forces. Many graduates of RMC served in various capacities during the war. In World War II, RMC continued its role in training officers, expanding its programs to meet the demands of the war effort. The college also contributed to research and development efforts related to military technology and tactics.

After the WW2, RMC adapted its program to reflect changing military needs and geopolitical realities. It continued to provide education and training to officers for the Canadian Armed Forces. In 1968, the CAF were unified, leading to changes in the structure and organization of military training and education. RMC became a tri-service institution, providing education and training to officers from the Canadian Army, Royal Canadian Navy, and Royal Canadian Air Force.

In recent years, RMC has undergone modernization and expansion efforts to keep pace with evolving military requirements and education standards. The college updated its facilities, curriculum, and training methods to meet the needs of the 21st-century military.

Throughout its history, RMC has maintained a strong sense of tradition and heritage. The college has a rich culture that includes various rituals, ceremonies, and symbols that reflect its military heritage and values. Today, the Royal Military College continues to play a vital role in educating and training officers for the Canadian Armed Forces, as well as fostering leadership and academic excellence among its cadets.
